1. In early August 1955, it was reported in numerous circles in Bucharest that at the end of June or early July 1955, several clashes had taken place between security troops and resistance groups. These reports were confirmed by the leader of a security battalion. He stated that units belonging to the Stalin (Brasov) Security Battalion had been attacked on several occasions in the mountains south of Fagaras by well-armed members of the underground. The security troops had twelve people killed and numerous casualties. 25X1
2. On 28 July 1954, a detachment of security troops arrived at the lodge and for two days the guests were restricted to the area after having been identified and registered by the authorities. The detachment was pursuing "armed individuals" who had taken food and clothing from numerous excursion groups which were in the Bucegi foothills at that time. 25X1
